

COMMUNITY, ARTS & CULTURE NEWSLETTER

As London exhales after the festive season, the city eases into a gentler rhythm—quieter streets, clearer winter light, and a renewed appetite for art. January offers a moment to reset, to return to the galleries, and to rediscover the pleasure of slow looking. At artlounge, we begin the year with an exhibition shaped by softness, atmosphere, and emotional clarity.

Upcoming at artlounge: Weightless

Weightless invites visitors to step beyond the heaviness of daily life and into a world where perception softens and the edges of reality become fluid. The exhibition gathers works that explore lightness—of emotion, movement, and memory—creating pockets of calm amid the noise of contemporary life.

Through luminous forms, dreamlike gestures, and abstracted environments, the artists evoke a sense of suspension and serenity. Weightless reflects a growing desire for art that offers emotional refuge, encouraging viewers to feel rather than simply observe.

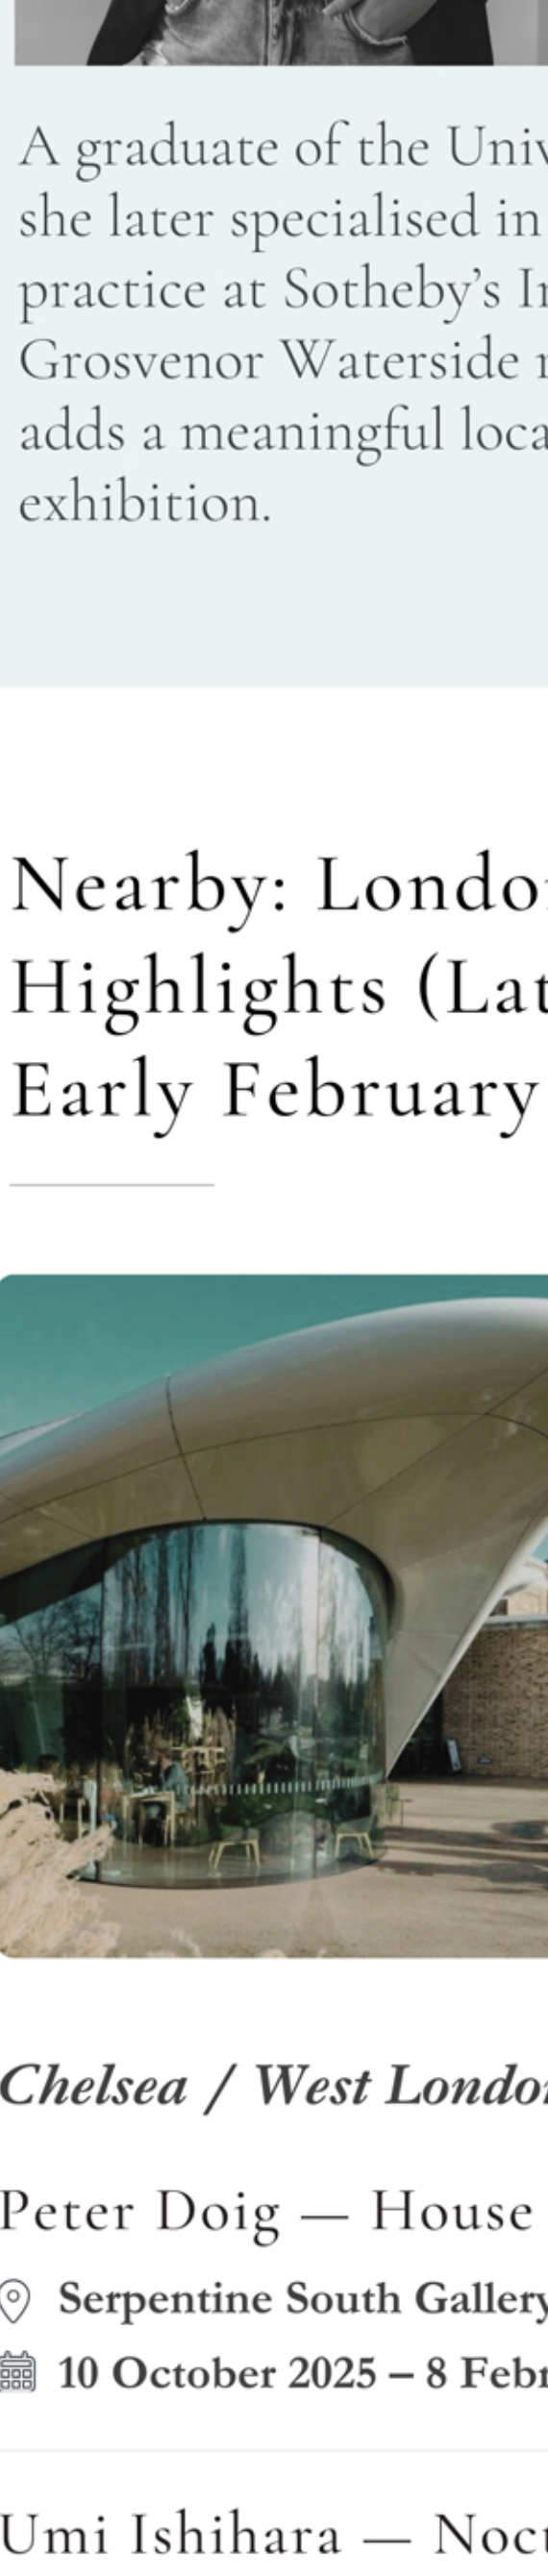

Here, time loosens, memories drift forward, and beauty reveals itself in the fleeting and the ethereal.

Ulviyya Akhundova brings a refined sense of lyricism to Weightless. Working within her ongoing theme of “Comfort Zone,” she distills the harmony of nature, cities, and familiar surroundings into balanced, atmospheric compositions that offer a quiet, restorative pause.

A graduate of the University of the Arts London, she later specialised in art business and curatorial practice at Sotheby’s Institute of Art. As a Grosvenor Waterside resident, her perspective adds a meaningful local resonance to the exhibition.
